Yeshe Tsogyal Drub-Chen Retreat

November 10-12, 2006

with

Nyungne Lama

Nyungne Lama (Lama Craig) invites you to his Ninole home for an intensive Tibetan Buddhist retreat. He has been taught the Yeshe Tsogyal practices by several high lamas. Last year's drub-chen led quick advancements for many of his students.

Yeshe Tsogyal is the embodiment of Discriminating Wisdom itself. With the practice of Yeshe Tsogyal we will be able to better understand our passions (the roots of desire), use them to further our experience of emptiness and bliss, and in the end discover compassion, the common denominator of all Buddha's teachings.

Drub-chen means "great accomplishment" in Tibetan, and it is said that to participate in a single week's drub-chen practice generates as much merit and wisdom as a year's solitary retreat. The Yeshe Tsogyal sadhana will be recited three times daily, and we will be involved in doing mantra recitation shifts, so that someone will be reciting the mantra at all times during the weekend (forty-eight hours). This is a closed retreat; after it begins we stay until the completion.

Please bring sleeping bag and pillow, toiletries, medications, flashlight, meditation cushion, alarm clock, and comfortable clothing. The retreat is free but donations are welcome to offset food costs, tsok offering and lama offerings.

A Yeshe Tsogyal empowerment is required for this retreat. If you have not had the initiation and are interested in joining us, please call the Lama at 895-6455 to discuss how to receive the empowerment beforehand.
